Notes from the President

The National Audubon Society has new leadership and so does the North Carolina Audubon state chapter. Coincidentally, HPAS has recently undergone significant reorganization by adopting new bylaws and electing new officers this year. The over-riding motivation for the changes in the organizational structure of the HPAS board of directors and committees has been to make it possible for more individuals to participate in contributing to the successes of the organization. Each committee will be composed of an interested group of persons who participate in bringing new ideas to the committee and help to implement those ideas. And when committee chairpersons bring well vetted suggestions forward to the HPAS board of directors, it is anticipated that the already well thought-out committee recommendations will have a very good chance of gaining the approval of the board of directors with minimum further board involvement.

I often think of committee members as the ‘eyes and ears’ for their committee’s ongoing priorities, whether these be issues of local conservation importance, furthering environmental educational activities, communicating with the community, watching out for and organizing interesting new potential programs and outings, or helping facilitate the social events for the group. And by spreading the responsibility, hopefully the whole experience will be that much more rewarding for everyone.

So there has never been a better time to step forward and contact your friendly committee chairpersons or fellow HPAS member if you think you might be interested in contributing to your local Audubon Society chapter - see the listing of committees and contact persons on page 4 of this newsletter and on the HPAS website: <http://highlandsaudubonsociety.org/>! As you can see, one doesn’t necessarily need to be a ‘black belt birder’ to make significant contributions to many of the activities! Our core interests will continue to focus on studying and conserving birds and bird habitat, and I think we all hope to become better birders. We are, for example, looking forward to helping better understand our community’s natural resources by inventorying bird species on various tracts of land that have been set aside as environmental easements, in conjunction with the local land trusts. And along with Audubon NC, we are planning to participate in helping increase awareness for improving natural environments for birds, and other creatures, in our own back yards and properties. There is much we can and will do and we welcome you to join in!

Beaufort, SC Field Trip

Several of our members will be attending the Carolina Bird Club meeting in Beaufort, SC September 30 – October 1. You do not have to be a member to attend. It will be a fun two days of field trips led by excellent birders with interesting programs in the evening. And you don’t have to be an experienced birder to enjoy it! The leaders and everyone else are great and it is a wonderful opportunity to expand your knowledge of birds and experience a quite different habitat than our beautiful mountains. For more information go to the CBC website <http://www.carolinabirdclub.org/> If you have any questions, you can contact Brock Hutchins at 787-1387. We hope to see you there!

Changing Climate in an Economic Game of the Environment

7:30 p.m. Monday, August 8, Highlands Civic Center

Andy Wood from Audubon North Carolina will speak on the "Changing Climate in an Economic Game of the Environment." In recent years there has been discussion about how climate change will adversely affect our environment and what we need to do about it. Seemingly opposed to taking action to prevent climate change are some corporate, individual and political forces that are concerned about the economic consequences of trying to prevent climate change. Andy will try to help us understand the conflicting information from both sides that has caused confusion in the public's mind and inaction on climate legislation. His program is designed to help people think about economic and environmental stakes in play, and meaningful conservation actions required to keep us in the game.

Andy has been the education director for Audubon North Carolina for the past 13 years. He has a BS degree from Texas A&M University in Wildlife and Fishery Science.

Come early for refreshments and fellowship. Hope to see you there!

Sustainable Energy Solutions

4:00 p.m. to 6:00 p.m. - Thursday, August 4

Zahner Lecture Series, Highlands Biological Station

With the vast amount of information available on renewable energy and energy efficiency solutions, it can be overwhelming to figure out which options are actually feasible for your own space. This lecture will explore low and no-cost energy efficiency solutions as well as a wide range of residential renewable energy options, in order to help home and business owners mitigate their energy costs. Meet in front of The Nature Center to begin a tour of the Highlands Biological Station's green energy projects.

Jacob Sadler from the WNC Green Building Council will give the presentation, which is co-sponsored with the Jackson-Macon Conservation Alliance as part of their Sustainable Solutions Project (funded by the Highlands Community Foundation and Mountain Findings).

Birds of Western North Carolina

7:30 p.m. Monday, September 12, Highlands Civic Center

Our speaker for this program is Simon Thompson from Asheville, NC. Originally from Suffolk, England, Simon has lived in North Carolina for over 10 years and has also lived in Lebanon, Kenya, Yemen and Ghana, where his interest in birds and natural history began. As director and originator of Ventures Birding Tours - <http://www.birdventures.com/> - Simon has led many birding trips all over the world. But for our program he will concentrate on our birds of western NC and some of the places to see them. So mark September 12 on your calendar and come early for some refreshments. Simon will also lead us on a bird walk the following morning. See the field trip schedule for details.

Annual Picnic

Please join us on Sunday, August 14 at 5:00 p.m. for our chapter's Annual Picnic, which will be held at the Highlands Civic Center, south picnic shelter (below the swimming pool). For $5.00 you will be provided with the main entree and drinks. Just bring a side dish to share. To make reservations, phone or email (by August 10) Michelle Styring at 743-9670 msty30005@aol.com or Mary Lou Waas at 743-3256 mlwaas@hotmail.com.
